

You're not a young pup anymore...

So how come your Company treats you like a dog?

You never cost them a penny. Anything they wanted from you, you gave them. Your problems were always your problems. No matter what — they always got their premium checks.

So how come they still treat you like you just got your bail bond license yesterday? Why is it that getting a transfer bond posted is like pulling teeth? And after all these years, should you still have a power inventory that leaves you hand-to-mouth each week?

Does it seem as if you know more about bail than anyone in the Company? And on the rare occasions when you do need an answer from them, shouldn't you be able to get one? Right away? Most importantly, aren't you entitled to a little respect from them?

You deserve better. National Surety Services, the national Managing General Agent for American Bankers Insurance Company, is actively seeking top-notch agents—those who have already cut their teeth—to join the largest, most well represented agent force in the country. If you are one of the best, get appointed with the best.

Not all companies that underwrite bail are the same. Your future will be brighter with the services, resources, and backing that we offer our agents.
